

Three Health Exchange Customers, Three Different Tax Breaks

A look at how hypothetical D.C. Health Benefit Exchange customers would benefit from tax subsidies on their insurance premiums

John, 40

Premium:
$238.40

Tax Credit:
$49.40

=

Monthly Cost to John: $189

The premium reflected is for the most competitive silver level plan for an individual earning $28,725 (or 250% of the federal poverty level).

Vince, 27

Premium: $124.05

Vince Gets No
Tax Credit

=

Monthly Cost to Vince: $124.05

Because the premium is low, “Vince” would not be eligible for a tax credit. The premium reflected is for the most competitive bronze level plan for an individual earning $28,725 (or 250% of the federal poverty level).

Joyce, 55

Premium:
$491.84

Tax Credit:
$236.69

=

Monthly Cost to Joyce : $255.15

The premium reflected is for the most competitive gold level plan for an individual earning $28,725 (or 250% of the federal poverty level).
